WASHINGTON PASTORS—XXVI.

REV. LUTHER HESS WARING.

Rev. Luther Hess Waring, in addition to being pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, of Georgetown, one of the historical edifices of this vicinity, is also an author of note. He received his bachelor of arts and master of arts degrees at Columbian (George Washington) University of this city, and graduated from the Lutheran Theological Seminary, at Gettysburg, Pa. He also spent a year at Harvard and two years in the Berlin University and at Leipzig. Rev. Mr. Waring is considered a specialist in history, sociology, and political science. He has also studied law. In addition to doing considerable newspaper and magazine writing, Mr. Waring has published several books, the best known of which is "Stones Rolled Away" (Henry Drummond), "Sundays in London," and "The Law and the Gospel of Labor." The first-named work is now on the press for a special edition for Madagascar, South Africa, and Australia. The property of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Georgetown is one of the landmarks of the Capital. The land was donated to the Lutheran Church in 1793—several decades before there was a city of Washington or a District of Columbia. At that time Georgetown was a part of Frederick County, Md. While there has not been continuous service since that date, the corporate property has remained intact. In fact, in 1826 the Supreme Court of the United States gave a decision on appeal granting a perpetual injunction against heirs of the original grantors and prohibiting any interference with the congregation's use and enjoyment of the property. The modest little edifice that was erected in 1857 has recently been renovated and made more attractive and homelike. The congregation is without any debt, and already has founded a new church building fund. More than $600 in cash was added to the fund during the winter.

Nearly one-third of the present communicating membership has been received into the church during the last fourteen months. The other members of the church are the following: Henry F. Kunkel, John E. Darcey, and Philip Ambrose Moyer, elders; William A. Pettis, John S. Berryman, Morris Walmer, D. V. S., Henry G. Wagner, and Charles Lester Blessing, deacons. The trustees are Henry G. Wagner, John S. Berryman, and E. S. Walmer, D. V. S.

CATHOLIC CHURCH NOTES.

A Triduum in honor of St. Ann, the mother of the Blessed Virgin Mary, held this week in St. Ann's Church, Tennallytown, terminated yesterday morning with mass and Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament in commemoration of the Feast of St. Ann. Solemn celebration of the feast will take place in September.

A generous and beautiful member of the parish recently presented to the beautiful little Church of St. Ann two handsome marble angels, imported from Carrara, Italy. Placed at each end of the rich marble altar, these figures of adoration complete and greatly enhance the beauty of the sanctuary.

The various confraternities of St. Vincent de Paul celebrated last week a glorious feast, the feast of their patron saint, Father Thomas E. McGuire, of St. Patrick's Church, presided at a meeting of the St. Vincent de Paul Superior Council of the District, held in Carroll Hall Sunday evening. At the close of the meeting all the members assembled in the church for Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

Very young men of his age were better known in Catholic circles and none more beloved than was William Culbert, son of Dr. William B. and Annie Truitt Daly, whose death by accident, drowning occurred last Sunday at Harpers Ferry, W. Va.

Gifted with remarkable physical beauty and an uncommon mentality, enhanced by cultivation, this accomplished youth of seventeen summers had just reached the threshold of a life of promise when God saw fit to claim him for his first home-heaven.

Great as were his mental and physical attributes, they were yet surpassed by an uncommon beauty of moral perfection, speaking of which Father Cooper, at the funeral of this beloved boy, said, "There is no strength like the strength of purity, no beauty like the beauty of a Christian life." That "He carried with him wherever he went the aroma of beauty and purity, and that he came in contact with him could not feel the better for his presence, and while sorrowfully mourning his loss, we know that the world was bettered because of his beautiful life and his name will ever be spoken with a tender and sacred reverence."

Father Paul Griffith, pastor of St. Augustine's Church, will leave next week for Plattburgh, N. Y. The Catholic Summer School in session there is this beautiful section of the country doubly attractive to the young people of the District, many of whom spend their vacation in this vicinity.

Father Griffith's earnest labors among the colored people of this city and in the various branches of the city and throughout the diocese, in addition to which he holds the esteem of all, are well known to the faithful.

Many Washingtonians will learn with keen regret that Father Ireton has been detached from St. Augustine's Church and will be leaving for his new field of labor in Baltimore, where he has been assigned to the parish of St. Gregory. The Great to the post of assistant pastor made vacant by the transfer of Father Philip Walsh, who assumes charge of a new parish in that city.
